Key record note:

Brody = the season's punching bag (26 votes) and still makes jury — that's insane durability.

Jacques only took 2 votes all season and still dominated FTC — "low-target, high-control" win profile.

🗿 IDOLS & ADVANTAGES

Season Power Shape (quick read)

Pre-merge idol power: Kelly + Ryan (tribal idols) set early paranoia

Merge idol swing: Kitty's merge idol becomes story power even more than vote power

Endgame safety: Mickey holding an old idol deep gave him "final stretch armor" even when he didn't always play it early

🏆 SEASON 6 AWARDS (FUSED INTO STATS PAGE)

🎯 Performance Awards

💪 Best Physical

Jacques

4 immunities + 4 total wins (season-high)

Winning across different formats let him control pacing: when he's safe, everyone else panics into messy targets.

🧠 Best Mental / Puzzle Brain

Emma

Merge immunity win (memory-sequence style) = peak "calm winner archetype."

Even when she didn't control votes, she controlled pressure — until rocks ended her.

🔥 Most Clutch

Ryan

Redemption Island: arrives and finishes 1st immediately (Episode 12 data)

Even after getting targeted by "hate lines," he kept generating leverage (idol clue → Mickey).

🛡️ Best Defensive Player

Mickey

Idol holder + unbreakable bonds = survives the season's most chaotic merge stretch.

Makes FTC while constantly being a "plan B" name.

🤝 Most Loyal

Jay

AnxietyBro stayed his spine the entire endgame.

Low votes against (4) + FTC seat = loyalty as survival strategy.

📊 Best Underdog

Brody

26 votes against and still reaches jury.

The season kept trying to delete him, and the math kept failing until it finally stuck.

🎭 Character Awards

😈 Biggest Villain

Jacques

Surgical social style: people feel “safe” with him right until they realize they’re the pawn.

Jury still rewards him 7–1–0: villain with résumé beats chaos.

🌀 Most Chaotic

Kitty

Idol power + emotional loyalty + manipulation susceptibility = constant volatility.

Took 15 votes and kept being a split option because everyone could justify it.

🤫 Quietest Threat

Mickey

Not the loudest, not the flashiest — just always protected by structure and timing.

⭐ Season MVP

Jacques

He’s the season’s engine: challenge dominance + endgame positioning + relationship leverage = winner lock.

💔 Unfortunate Awards

💥 Biggest Meltdown

Kelly

Multiple “major meltdown” flags in the merge/endgame stretch.

Still reaches Final 4 anyway — which makes the stress spiral feel even more dramatic.

🎲 Most Unlucky

Emma

Goes out on rocks (the purest “you didn’t get voted out, you got mathematically sacrificed” ending).

😢 Most Tragic Exit

Kelly

Final 4: 2–2 tie → 1–1 revote → fire-making loss

That’s the most painful way to go because she survives everything until the last gate.

💔 Betrayal Awards

💔 Biggest Betrayal

Kitty’s idol misfire arc (merge window)

Her power gets redirected away from protecting herself/Emma and turns into vulnerability.

It doesn’t read like a villain betrayal — it reads like someone being played.

💔 Second Biggest Betrayal

Ryan’s vote-war fallout with Emma

Their extreme hatred line doesn’t just stay personal — it becomes a coalition fracture that drags in other pairs.

🥇 Special Awards

🛡️ Iron Person

Brody

Most votes against (26) and still makes jury. Endurance is a strategy.

👑 Best Jury Win

Jacques

7–1–0 is a blowout. The jury didn't "settle," they crowned him.

🗣️ Best Narrative Moment

Emma's rock elimination

The season's most dramatic "game doesn't care about your résumé" moment.
